The Tarish Magazine of St Stephen's Church Guernsey

August 2025

Hello again my lovely church family; I simply can't believe that a month has gone by again! I am also amazed (and a little depressed) to realise that the next time I write to you will be in September which is officially Autum! Never mind; each season has it's beauty and benefits as I have said before, and I am not mentioning your editor's birthday!! No really, I am not mentioning it!

On St Sampson's day, I went with Fliss to see the display in St Sampson's church (see nerd corner for details) and I had a lovely time; the flowers were stunning and the display was incredible. I mention this because it reminded me of an inspirational quote that I heard recently. You see there were several newspaper cuttings with pictures of Murray and lots of signs with his name on and the quote I heard was 'people die twice; once when they actually die and once when people stop saying their name'; isn't that lovely! Of course, in that way, there are several people that will never die; especially in our church family because they made such a difference to our lives and will never be forgotten.

I was walking my dog the other day when two lads on bikes charged past me "Oh Oh I thought here comes trouble" however; as they passed one of them called out "gosh what a lovely dog" I called back a thank you and he replied with "you are more than welcome." I bet you can see where I am going with this:- never judge a book by it's cover! There are so many really nice people in this world and I think that they more than make up for the rotters which is something that I TRY to remember when I am watching the news.

No more pontificating. I am sure that you have had quite enough for one month. All I have to say now is enjoy the rest of your summer, look after yourselves and be happy.

Lots of love Nikki

All contributions for the September (!) magazine will be gratefully received!!.

A Walk on the Wild Side

Yesterday we walked across the causeway to Lihou Island for the first time since arriving in Guernsey. Similar to St Michael's Mount, Mont St Michael and Lindisfarne, the island is accessible only at low tide. One can only imagine how many people in earlier times made that crossing, mindful that they would be cut off once the waters returned. The walk over got me thinking about pilgrimages and how they are an integral part of our faith journey. The challenge of going to a place which carries a holy significance and offering prayer there is a practice which many have found meaningful. There have been numerous pilgrimage sites across the world. The most well-known site is Jerusalem, home to three of the five main world religions (Judaism, Christianity and Islam). Other places carry their own significance, Canterbury being one close to the hearts of Anglicans worldwide.

What does it mean to have a pilgrim heart? In essence, each Christian is called to follow a special path throughout their life; one that leads them towards paradise. "For here we do not have an enduring city, but we are looking for the city that is to come." – Hebrews 13:14. Every experience that we go through, every milestone we pass, each offers us a small insight into our ultimate goal, union with our Heavenly Father. Nothing that we go through in this life is a wasted experience, all are opportunities that enable us to grow as people of faith. This realisation of our earthly pilgrimage is one aspect of our faith journey that we often overlook.

Our journey here at St Stephen's is likewise a pilgrimage towards the heart of God. There have been numerous challenges over the years (and I am very sure there will be more to come) and we are called to remain faithful to the vison of our founders 160 years ago. St Stephen's Church remains a sanctuary to the traveller, a place for prayer and reflection, and a welcome home for those who seek His presence. Although there is so much going on in the life of the Church, we remain a pilgrim people at heart, and seek to glorify His name in all we do.

One of the many joys I experience at St Stephen's is to come across visitors to the church, often gazing at the beautiful windows which we are so blessed to be custodians of. One couple, from the Netherlands, were astonished at the sheer number of Morris windows we have. Others have written in our visitor's book and spoken of the calm and peaceful presence they have found. St Stephen's remains committed to offering a welcome to any who would like to come in and experience the wonder of our beautiful church. Our prayer is that all visitors would leave with a sense of being that much nearer to God in their journey because of their time spent here.

August marks the second anniversary of my arrival in Guernsey. I look back on the past few years with such joy in my heart! We have much to explore still, and have been so blessed by this experience as a family. Thank you to everyone who have reached out to us and helped make our time here the precious event it has been. We will return to Lihou I am sure... the wildness of it is so wonderful, as is the peace. God bless you and keep you close to His heart.

Love Fr Joe

A bit about your curate

Father Joe suggested to me that it would be helpful to write a few lines to say a bit about me. Conscious of quite how often something I say in my day job running the Guernsey Financial Services Commission appears in the local media, I thought I'd talk a little bit about the Church and me rather than the ins and outs of trying to sensibly regulate between 40% and 50% of Guernsey's economy.

I was born into a fairly religious household and was thus a "cradle Christian" as I think we are now called, baptised into the Church of England at six weeks. My father had grown up in the firmly protestant part of the Church of England — much preferring BCP Mattins to Holy Communion whereas my mother is more middle of the road Church of England with her great love being BCP Evensong. My maternal grandfather, who became a non-stipendiary priest after retiring early from his headship of a secondary modern school was both a Greek scholar and somewhat on the traditional catholic wing of the church — I can remember going to Roman monastic services with my grandparents in France aged nine when on holiday.

I occasionally attended Sunday school in Wimbledon although I preferred proper services where one could relax and read all parts of the service book whilst the service was going on We moved to Sidlesham in West Sussex when I was eight and I became a server at St Mary's Church shortly after I was confirmed aged 12. We had a succession of strong vicars there who encouraged me to carry on going to Church during my teens. They were mostly, I suppose, on the gently catholic wing of the Church of England although in a rural context, this meant slightly more Holy Communion and slightly less Mattins on a Sunday rather than anything called "mass". Then I went to my father's old boarding school for my sixth form where I rapidly became a chapel prefect under my Father's old headmaster and now Provost. Canon Charles Johnson who was definitely at the protestant end of the Church of England, learning something of that tradition from him. After school I found myself at the University of Durham where I read a little theology (Church history and patristics) in my first year whilst majoring on politics and much enjoying choral evensong at the cathedral - almost literally on my doorstep in my final year.

Working around the world after university including tours in Algeria during the Islamic insurgency there and in Oman (which was rather different as not only did you not need a bodyguard to leave the compound, you didn't even need to lock your car) gave me two quite different perspectives on the Arab world. I then worked for a while as a strategy consultant.

The normal expectation was that you do two or three years consulting before going off to do an MBA. I didn't find business intellectually interesting so rather than try for a Warton or a INSEAD MBA, I applied to Oxford to read theology to better help me explore the foundations of our faith.

I had wanted to do the full BA/MA degree in two years but finances and parental nudging not to opt out of mainstream employment intervened so I contented myself with just taking a late "gap year" funding myself to study the post graduate diploma, focusing on Gospels, Epistles and Systematic Theology. My college and the examiners were kind to me and I did half think about further academic theology at this point but I felt more called towards government service so I joined the civil service (diplomatic stream) directly after Oxford and worked my way through various government departments, becoming a de-regulation specialist before, ironically, being poached to join the UK's financial services regulator which was apparently after a quieter life without me incessantly using my Cabinet Office pulpit to provide it with suggestions as to how to regulate better. Meanwhile my Church journey continued as my son Charlie became a chorister at Sherborne Abbey bringing me many hours of beautiful choir practices and services as a choir parent.

When I moved to Guernsey in 2013, we started worshipping at St Martin's Church because we were renting in St Martin's and I was brought up to always support your village church. We carried on going to St Martin's until its Rector left to become Dean of Jersey at which point we moved to St Peter's, where we had bought a house, at about the same time as Adrian Datta became Rector there. Adrian gently encouraged me to become more involved, to give the odd sermon with the Dean's blessing, to help out in worship and to run a trial Alpha course. He also suggested I should enter into the discernment process for ordained ministry - something I entered with an open mind being slightly surprised when the Church seemed to think it wanted me. Following this, I went and studied at Sarum College on a weekends, monthly essay and weekly zoom tutorial basis. I found this a remarkably difficult thing to do part-time, rather different from the elysium year I had previously had studying theology at Oxford or Durham but I was lucky enough to be in a cohort with some wonderful ordinands and we continued to endure together. I think they call it formation because it is designed to teach you that becoming an ordained minister should not be easy as life as a minister will throw a lot at you.

I'd describe myself as a rurally orientated Book of Common Prayer sort of Church of England person. I take a liberal view of the broad church that is the English Church in so much that I think that to the extent incense or guitars help bring different people to come to love and know Jesus, they are equally valid. Why you may ask was I sent to St Stephen's given my traditional low church background? Largely I think because the Church of England considers it good for a trainee minister to spend at least part of his curacy outside his comfort zone to come to understand another tradition within the English Church. I have much appreciated your support thus far in my very part time ministry and continue to learn more things about High Church practice with each Sunday that passes.

Father William

If there is such a thing as a Nerdery -Gene then I know exactly where I got mine from in bucket loads. It seems to have skipped my brother and sister and landed hard and fast with me. Not that I'm pointing the finger at any one parent in particular but let's just say that my Father once said to me, 'When I think of a mad idea I can always rely on you Felicity to take it one step further'. Now this is not a blame game just fact.

As some of you might remember my Father made Coracles. He developed it from the traditional Welsh style river type into something more seaworthy, he used tree branches to form the frame and studied the various types of trees to find the best one for strength and flexibility. He practiced and studied the art of sculling with one paddle and made a sail attached to a mast (also made of tree branches) that could be easily set up and removed depending on the weather conditions. He also started to write a book on his coracle journey.

Felicity, why are you mentioning it now in Nerd-corner normally a sanctuary of printer related and Nerdsville (Pop. 2) adventures and philosophies?

Asks no-one

Well to celebrate St Sampsons day (28th July) at St Sampsons Church they had a display which included one of Dad's coracles that had been kindly looked after all these years and done up for the occasion. I rooted around in the loft and found the Newspaper article about his trip to Herm in the Coracle in 1974 for the display (Yes folks it took 3 hours the journey that is) and also this diagram he made on how to make a 'Channel Coracle'

So you see my Nerdlettes amongst all the Nerdery in Nerdsville (Pop. 2) there is fun and adventures that might at the time seem weird to the general populous but go down in history and may even have an interest 50 years in the future.

(I wonder if my printers will be included in a flower festival with a flower arrangement on top in 2075, just a thought for the social committee)

Till next time Nerdlettes

Don't judge the way other people connect to God, to each his own way and his own prayer. God does not take us at our word. He looks deep into our hearts. It is not the ceremonies or rituals that make a difference, but whether our hearts are sufficiently pure or not.

Saints of the Month

St Monica and St Augustine

One of the greatest love stories is that of St Monica, who loved her Lord and her son with great devotion to both. Her son was openly hostile to her faith and eagerly went after any other philosophy he could find. Monica turned to the Lord in prayer. When her son left their home in North Africa and went to Italy to continue his wild lifestyle, she followed him.

Finally she approached the Bishop of Milan, St

Ambrose, and asked for his help. Through his educated reasoning and sound theology, the young man was brought to Christ.

Monica was born in modern day Algeria and was married to a Roman politician named Patricius (a pagan) in Thagaste. Although they had three children, two boys and a girl, Patricius refused to allow them to be baptised. Although her faith and prayers annoyed Patricius, he held Monica in high regard. According to popular legend, Monica wept every night for her son.

Finally, after 17 years of prayers and supplications, her son discovered the joy of knowing Jesus and he was baptized by Bishop Ambrose in the church of St John the Baptist at Milan. Monica and her son left for Africa shortly thereafter and reached the port of Ostia. Knowing that she was nearing her death, Monica tried to comfort her son with the words, "One thing there was for which I desired to remain in this life a little longer, that I should see you a catholic Christian before I died." Monica died (her feast day is May 4th) and was buried in Ostia, and her son's grief inspired the writings of one of the greatest books of Christian literature – The Confessions of St Augustine.

We cannot look at the life of St Augustine and not remember his Mum. It was her devotion to the Christian faith and her determination to hold her wayward son close to the heart of God that ultimately saw Augustine becoming a Christian. "Late have I loved you, O Beauty, so ancient and so new, for behold, you were within me and I was outside, and I sought you outside... Lord, you made us for yourself, and our hearts are restless till they rest in you"

St Augustine was living in a very difficult time, when the peace and stability of the Roman Empire were crumbling. After Rome was sacked by Germanic invaders in 410AD, he wrote The City of God as a reassurance to the people that, although material works were impermanent, the rule of Almighty God can never be overthrown. Augustine imagined the Church as a spiritual City of God, distinct from the material Earthly City. He believed that the grace of Christ was indispensable to our human freedom. He was priested in 391 and consecrated as Bishop of Hippo in 395. He was well known for his preaching and acts of charity. He died on the 28th of August in 430AD and his writings remain relevant to the moral and intellectual questioning of our current times.

Life is 2 sided, choose the better side of it.

BEGIN WITH LOVE

(Taken from Foster and Beebe's "Longing for God", at the end of the chapter on John Cassian who disappeared from history after 432 AD.)

DISCIPLE: Dearest Lord Jesus, if discernment truly is "the mother of all virtues" then I want to be seeking hard after it. But where do I begin? How do I begin?

JESUS: My precious child, it is important for you to begin right where you are. Begin with your children, and your neighbours and those you work with every day.

Listen.....really listen to what they say. Look.....really look into their eyes. Discernment begins with loving attention. In time, loving attention will grow into heart compassion.

DISCIPLE: Yes, Lord, I see the value of loving attention and of heart compassion....though I am not sure I truly understand heart compassion. Still, I don't see how these things lead to discernment.

JESUS: First things first, my eager child. The first thing is not discernment but love. So first learn to be with those around you without demanding anything or getting anything from them. Simply be with them. Enjoy their company, not for what they can give you but for who they are. Take interest in the things they find interesting.

Each person in your circle of nearness is of infinite worth. Discover, my child, the great worth in each person. Move past the human superficialities of style and social custom which tend to hide the soul. Stay with them until you can see the soul. Once you see the soul, really see the soul, you will stand back in wonder at the treasure in your midst. This will draw you to heart compassion.

In time this will enable you to see the spirit of the person and once you see the spirit animating the person the process of discernment will begin. But you don't want to run ahead of yourself. Begin with love.

DISCIPLE: And so I will. Thank you. Amen.

A Joke from Father Joe

A Scotsman, an Englishman and an Irishman want to get into the Olympics but they haven't got tickets.

The Scotsman picks up a manhole-cover, tucks it under his arm and walks to the gate. "McTavish, Scotland" he says, "Discus," and in he walks. The Englishman picks up a length of scaffolding and slings it over his shoulder. "Waddington-Smythe, England," he says, "Pole vault," and in he walks. The Irishman looks around, picks up a roll of barbed wire and tucks it under his arm. "O'Malley, Ireland," he says, "Fencing.

Happy Holidays!

We hope you are all enjoying the summer and for those on holiday, a time to relax, restore and rejuvenate. #### In Loving Memory of Mary-Carol Gales

Eulogy written by her daughter Helen and delivered by Helen at Mary-Carol's funeral on 30th April 2025

So, I'm going to try and get through this without crying or swearing. Those who know me will know how difficult that will be... but I'm making an effort given that I'm in a church and all! Most of you will know that I'm Helen, Mary-Carol's daughter. Although I probably look very different to when you last saw me!

Some memories of mum to make you laugh / cringe – they do me, so it's only fair to share them with you:

The time my best friend, mum and I went on holiday to Barcelona. My friend and I were talking on the beach and turned around to find mum sunbathing starkers, not a care in the world! We were 17, and still cringe at the memory.

The time mum went with me to the Commonwealth's in Australia and we went into some gift shops. She gleefully squeezed a novelty keyring – made from a kangaroo's testicle! I don't think she realised what it was at first.

And the time mum came to visit me at university, and my (now) husband and I took her to Alnwick Castle, where she was determined to try archery. She tried and tried – really tried and tried – , but it always missed the target and went into the netting!

That last anecdote summed up mum, Mary-Carol. She was never one to show emotions or affection. However, she was dedicated in everything she did. From working at Woolwich, running her translation business, running Guernsey Babysitting Group, being part of Le Circle Francais, and the church choir for many years – amongst no doubt many other things I've missed – there was absolutely no doubt that she didn't just keep busy, she was determined and driven to succeed in everything she did! This undoubtedly shaped me also; in my fencing, photography, and day job – my perseverance came from her.

Mum also loved music. I remember her still having a huge crush on Cliff Richard when I was a teen; and his music was playing constantly, along with the classical music that she also loved.

One of my best memories of mum was just in January this year, when a band from the charity Music in Hospitals and Care came into Brehon Ward and I was singing to her, and she was laughing and smiling – probably because I don't share the same musicality as her!

Mum taught me to have a childlike wonder at the little things – even iridescent sea slugs on a marine biology trip! Mum had a heart of gold; she cared selflessly and donated to worthy causes frequently. She even temporarily adopted a stray cat for a day when it wandered into our home!

Mum passed away wearing a necklace I sent her. It's no coincidence that I'm wearing an identical one today. She is now at peace, but her memory will live on in all of us. We love you and miss you Mary-Carol – Mum!
